

Asus reveals what it meant with its "it'll move you" teaser at Computex 2013-- the VivoMouse, an unusually shaped wireless mouse with a circular desktop touchpad grafted on top.

Supposedly a "world first," the VivoMouse supports both Windows 7 and 8 with the touchpad handling both gesture and traditional mouse button duties.

The wedge-shaped design also allows one-handed handheld remote use, as demoed at Computex with the newly announced VivoPC model. Designed for living room applications, the VivoPC is just 56mm tall and features SonicMaster audio, 802.11ac wifi, x2 internal memory slots and a drive bay accommodating either 3.5- or 2.5-inch SATA 6Gbit/s HDDs.

Both Asus VivoMouse and VivoPC will be available from Q3 2013.
