

Xbox One Audio Products from Polk

Written by Marco Attard
12 June 2013

The Xbox One games/entertainment console might be less than a month old, but that doesn't stop Polk from announcing the N1 Soundbar and 4 Shot Gaming Headphones at E3 2013, both "finely tuned to the new Xbox One experience."

The result of collaboration with Microsoft, the N1 soundbar features 4 custom audio settings designed with the console in mind. The FPS and Racer modes are ideal during gaming, while Cinema and Music modes are self-explanatory.

The N1 will be available from Q3 2013 in black on black and vanilla with contrasting wood.

Meanwhile the 4 Shot headset packs Polk audio in an ergonomic design complete with near-field microphone, spring-steel headband and pivoting ear cups.

Xbox 360 users will also get a Polk product-- the I33t headphones.

Both 4 Shot and I33t headphones should ship in Q4 2013 in desert white, nova blue and ink black.

Go Polk Working With Microsoft to Create Audio Products for Xbox One