Customers with a want for digital art can do so with a new Wacom device, as the company announces a "significantly upgraded" version of the Intuos pen tablet aimed at creative beginners and enthusiasts.

The Intuos upgrade comes in two sizes-- small and medium. The tablets connect to PCs via Bluetooth (or USB cable in the case of a lower-cost version of the small tablet) and customers can choose two out of three bundled software options, Corel Painter Essentials 6, Corel AfterShot 3 or Clip Studio Paint Pro.

Further tablet features include a built-in tray, four express key, LED indicator and the promise of a 60% improvement in battery life compared to previous Intuos models. Meanwhile the pen boasts 4096 pressure sensitivity levels, battery-free Wacom EMR technology and a design with increased weight, soft touch grip area, in-pen nib compartment and nib extractor.

The above mentioned Wacom Intuos tablets are available now in a choice of charcoal black, pistachio green or berry pink colours
