

Asus ROG Releases Pink Line

Written by Marco Attard
26 June 2019

Asus ROG decides to get pretty in pink, as the limited edition line of PNK accessories come in fetching two-tone shades of strawberry milkshake and light gray, released just in time for National Pink day (23 June).

The PNK line provides a perhaps welcome break from the tacticool blacks seen in typical gaming hardware. It consists of variants on the ROG Gladius II Origin mouse, ROG Sheath mousepad, ROG Strix Flare keyboard (with MX Red or MX Brown switches) and the ROG Strix Fusion 300 headset. The company seems to hope customers will buy all products, and just as well since the Sheath mousepad is actually big enough to hold them all.

The line of pink-coloured accessories is actually a long time coming-- Asus initially started teasing the products ahead of Valentine's Day. However the company failed to release them, leaving Razer to commemorate the lovers' day by launching Quartz Pink line of laptops and peripherals.

So far the PNK line is only available in N. America, and Asus gives no word of a European launch.

Go Asus ROG PNK