Samsung announces a follow-up to the Galaxy Tab 7.0-- the Galaxy Tab 2 (7.0), the first Samsung tablet shipping with Android 4.0 (aka Ice Cream Sandwich).

Available in either 3G (HSPA+) or wifi versions, the device carries a 1GHz dual-core processor, 1GB RAM and a 1024x600 LCD display, together with Bluetooth connections, x2 cameras (3MP rear-facing and a VGA front-facing webcam) and a variety of embedded Google applications.

A 4000mAh battery powers the device, while A-GPS is also included.

The tablet is set to hit the global market on March 2012, launching first in the UK.
