

A Kids' Tablet from Oregon Scientific

Written by Marco Attard
15 February 2012

Oregon Scientific enters the kid-centric tablet market with the MEEP!-- an Android-powered 7" tablet ideal for your customers' offspring.

It carries a Neonode zForce touchscreen inside a tough design, together with a rubber silicon sleeve for extra protection. Internet connection come through wifi, and parents can monitor their children's internet usage via parental controls adjustable through internet enabled devices.

An SD card slot allows the expansion of internal memory. Oregon Scientific says a MEEP! accessory range (including musical instruments) will also be available soon.

Go Oregon Scientific Announces New Tablet for Kids

Go Oregon Scientific