

GAME CEO: Retailer is in "Good Shape"

Written by Marco Attard
14 November 2012

---

GAME CEO Martyn Gibbs backs Game Retail owners OpCapita following the Comet collapse into administration-- telling

The Telegraph

the retailer is in

"good shape."

According to Gibbs GAME is set to make £20 million in earnings (before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortisation) in the financial year ending July 2013.

Apparently games such as FIFA 13, Halo 4 and Assassin's Creed 3 helped the retailer. Gibbs claims GAME UK market share totals around 35%, despite operating from around half the number of stores.

The retailer also opened new stores in Reading, Manchester and Sheffield.

"I have all the cash I need to trade through peak [period]. There has been nothing that I tabled that I didn't get investment for. I can't ask for more," Gibbs continues, before adding that interest payments to OpCapita are "not at all" impeding the business.

OpCapita loans to GAME total £106m-- and GAME operates without credit insurance, one of the reasons for the Comet collapse.

GAME CEO: Retailer is in "Good Shape"

Written by Marco Attard
14 November 2012

---

OpCapita bought Game from administration back in April 2012 , taking over all GAME UK assets including 333 UK GAME and Gamestation stores.

Go GAME Group £20m Lift Despite Fears Over Comet Links \(The Telegraph\)