

Lenovo to Make More Mobile Devices

Written by Marco Attard
09 May 2012

Lenovo plans to grab more of the mobile device pie as it invests $800 million in a mobile device production base in the city of Wuhan, China.

The Chinese vendor is better known as the 2nd biggest PC vendor in the world... or 3rd biggest, depending on which analyst reports you refer to.

The Wuhan facility will start operations from October 2013, and will produce smartphones, tablets and other mobile devices for both Chinese and international markets.

Lenovo's mobile device strategy includes the K800 smartphone, one of the 1st Intel-powered Android smartphones. Expect to hear more on non-PC Lenovo offerings over the coming months, then.

Go Lenovo Establishes Industrial Base in Wuhan