

Incipio follows the June Skullcandy buy with the acquisition of Griffin Technology, the maker of mobile device accessories, for an undisclosed sum.

"Griffin has a 25-year history of designing, manufacturing and distributing iconic mobile accessories," Incipio says. "As part of Incipio Group, Griffin strengthens our product development and manufacturing capabilities, complements our existing product lines in rugged cases, power and connectivity, and allows our brands to reach a broader domestic and international audience through enhanced distribution in the business-to-business, enterprise and education verticals."

Griffin is known for the Survivor protective case brand, as well as a range of power and connectivity solutions. Post-acquisition it will retain the brand name and global HQ in Nashville, Tennessee.

This year saw Incipio make a number of acquisitions-- as well as Skullcandy it also bought accessory makers Clamcase and Incase.
